Review: Lykke Li by Jamell Ackford

as she appeared through the smoke there was an exciting feeling throughout the crowd. Together with the sound of echoing tribal drums and black sheets draping from the ceiling gave the feeling of natural fluidity.

She opened with Jarome and continued the gig with Dance Dance Dance, I follow Rivers, I'm Good, I'm Gone and Get Some. These got a great response from the crowd and continued with this feeling throughout.

Crack Magazine said "The totally unexpected introduction of the shimmering arpeggiated of The Knife's Silent Shout was a bitter sweet highlight (all approximately one and a half minutes the band played). This was a shame, because the band had the keyboard part completely mastered, and if any vocalist could do Karin from The Knife justice, it'd be Lykke Li. A credit to Trinity, the sound was spot on from the offset, but particularly noticeable during that section, for obvious reasons".

Li finished with the tracks I Know Places and Sadness Is A Blessing, it was a chilled ending to the night, as she said to the crowd "I feel nothing". Crack magazine said "It's a safe bet she was in the small minority at that moment, and most leaving Trinity felt nothing but love for her and that performance".

FREE Garden Party

The Trinity Centre's annual music, arts and craft bonanza takes place on Sunday May 15, with an eclectic mix of live Music performances headlined by Dub Mafia one of Bristol's home grown talents.

The afternoon begins with Trinity's resident DJ Read, first-class shows packed with soul, funk, reggae and much more.

Throughout the day will have the likes of Hot Buttered Soul, Jon Kennedy, Urban Funkstar, Dinnall, The Duckworths, The Doubtful Guest, The Scribes & to headline the event will be Dub Mafia. Dub Mafia are a band whose originality and uniqueness speaks for itself. As one of only a handful of live dance acts nationally, the band set themselves apart from all others. They have had a smashing European tour and festival tour around the UK. This should be an exciting act to see, not one to miss. The day will be compered by Ujima FM's own Mistri.

The day will be full of activities and fun family and friends, food stalls and an open bar, local arts & craft stalls plus Graffiti workshops and more throughout the day. Lets all hope for sun to make this day complete.

Pay It Forward

To mark International Pay It Forward Day on 28 April 2011, a collective of Bristol based arts organisations joined forces and hosted a week of free activities, to encourage participants to pay the good deed forward.

Trinity had a jam packed week of activities from skills swap, mural making to DJ and recording workshops. To finish the week off we had an Alternative Royal Wedding Party, many people from the community packed a picnic and joined us for a day of arts and crafts, board games, music and wedding themed fun with an alternative twist. It was a great day which brought people together and gave our diverse, vibrant communities a day of music, dancing and celebration the only way we know how.
